AUGUST 2016

Khandallah School redevelopment

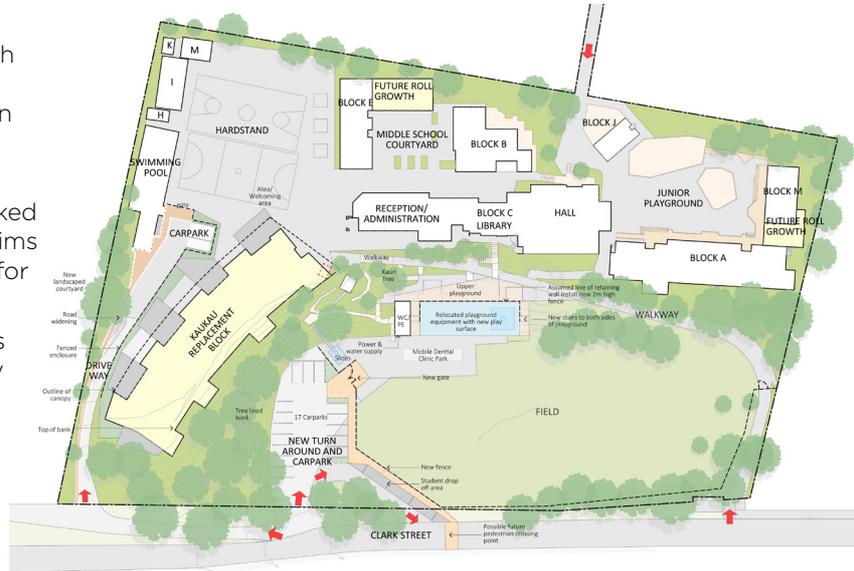

After months of research, planning and collaboration with Ministry of Education and the design team at McKenzie Higham, Khandallah School has received an official 'green light' for the highly anticipated Kaukau Block (D-Block replacement).

This has already been an exciting journey as we have worked together to create a 'masterplan' for our campus, which aims to transform and evolve our school in line with our vision for teaching and learning; now and into the future.

Every decision around the build - up to this point, and as we continue into the detailed design phase - is driven by the school's commitment to delivering fully integrated, connected, and meaningful teaching and learning.

Kaukau Block will be a major 'new build', with the equivalent of nine teaching spaces.

This newsletter aims to inform and update our school community on the project.

Our journey so far

Investigations into solutions for issues in D Block carried out by Ministry of Education

School works with design team on master plan. Master plan for school developed and presented to Ministry of Education review panel for consideration and approval

Ministry of Education engaged architect to develop master plan and provide solution for our school

Master plan and new teaching space design approved and project given green light

Into the future

Preliminary and developed design completed
Consents and tender process commence
Ground works start on 'drop off' area and top car park

Students and teachers move into new teaching space at end of 2018

Construction on new teaching block underway

Demolition of D Block commences
Site works completed

During construction

During construction of the new teaching block our school programmes will continue as usual in the current buildings.

Kaukau Block will be constructed on the top car park; the construction zone will be fenced off to ensure our children's safety.

When Kaukau Block is complete, our children and staff will move in and D Block will be secured, fenced off and demolished. The final phase will be the construction of a terraced area where D Block was situated.

Health and safety

The new building will comply 100% with new building standards. The safety of students, staff and general public during construction will be the highest priority.

Health and safety plans will be put in place prior to any work proceeding on site, and will be actively managed throughout the construction period.

Construction zones will be in place during construction, with no access available to students, staff, or the general public.
